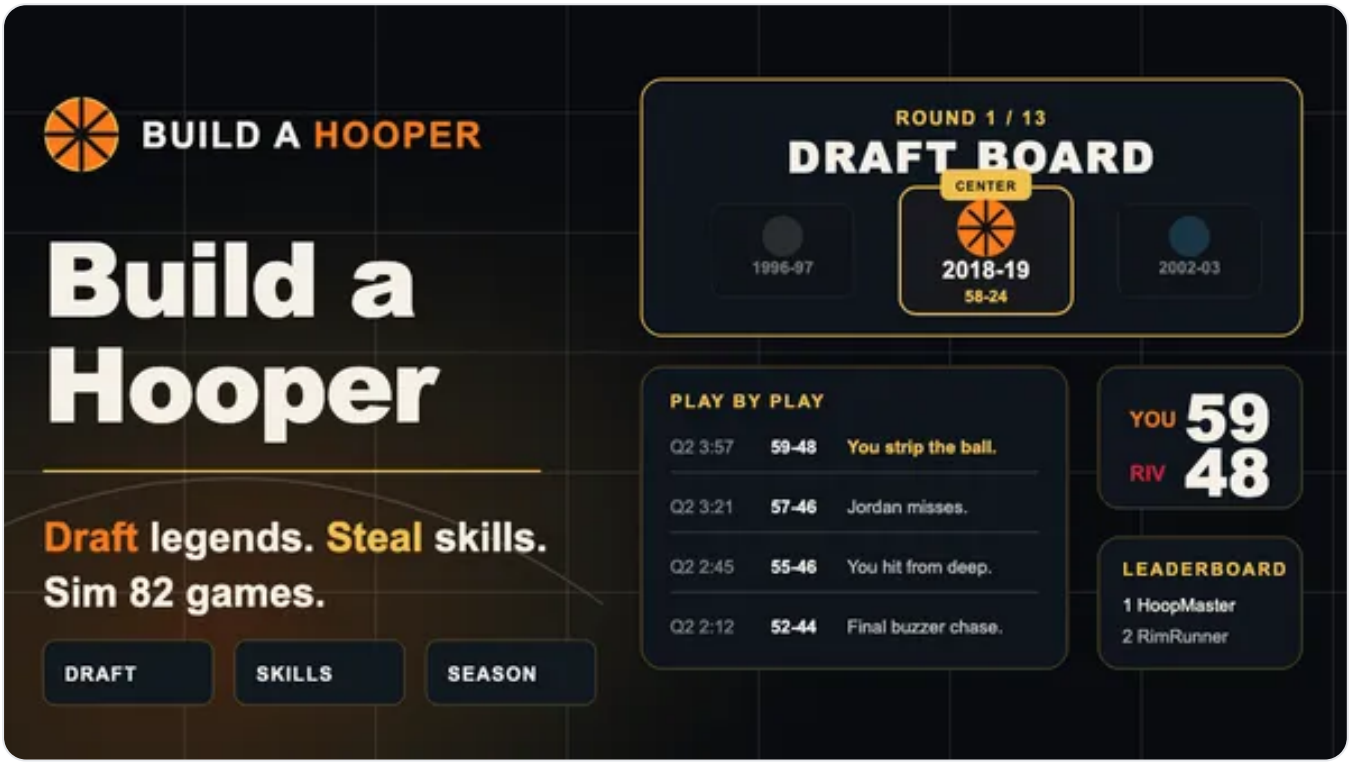
Build a Hooper

Free browser basketball player builder with legend drafts and an 82-game season sim.



About

Build a Hooper is a basketball player builder that lets you create a custom NBA-style hooper, steal traits from legends, and run a full 82-game season simulation. The app turns basketball fandom into a browser game: you spin historic teams, choose one player from each round, and add exactly one skill to your build until your roster card is complete. From there, the season sim tracks results, standings, game logs, and leaderboard placement.

What is Build a Hooper?

Build a Hooper is a free basketball player builder that mixes a fantasy draft with a season assemble a custom hooper from historic NBA talent. The site's core loop is simple: spin a team, pick a legend, steal one skill, and repeat until your build is finished.

The app is browser-based and does not require signup. It is designed around a fun question rather than a spreadsheet exercise: if one custom player could borrow the best traits from different eras, how would that player perform over 82 games? The build a hooper experience answers that with a full simulation, season records, and a leaderboard.

Key features

Build a Hooper focuses on a few specific mechanics that make the build a hooper format easy to understand:

- 13-round draft: the draft room runs for 13 picks, and each pick adds one legend trait to your player.
- Historic team spins: each round pulls an all-time team, with examples shown on the site such as 1996 Chicago and 2017 Golden State.
- Single-skill selection: you draft one legend and steal exactly one attribute from that player, such as shooting, defense, athleticism, clutch ability, rebounding, or playmaking.
- 82-game season simulator: after the draft, the app simulates a full season and grades the build by wins, losses, overall performance, and scoring average.
- Player card: the custom hooper card shows build ID, overall, skill radar, record, seed, title, and stolen skills once the build is complete.
- Leaderboard: completed 82-game seasons can appear on the season leaderboard, where rankings are ordered by wins, then losses, then overall, then scoring average.
- Sharing: the FAQ notes that users can share their result after the simulation.

The build a hooper system is intentionally narrow, which helps the site stay fast and focused. You are not managing a full franchise, only the evolution of one player and the outcome of one season.

How to use it

Start the draft from the main page. No signup is required, so you can jump in immediately.

Spin a historic team for the round. The site surfaces an all-time roster from a past NBA team.

Choose one legend from that team. You are not taking the whole roster, only one player.

Steal one skill from that legend. The site describes the skill pool as attributes like shooting, defense, athleticism, clutch, and more.

Repeat for 13 rounds until your custom player is complete.

Run the 82-game sim to see how the build survives a full season.

Review the player card and leaderboard to inspect the result, compare outcomes, or share the season.

If you want to understand the site before drafting, the navigation includes Draft, Team Archive, Leaderboard, How to Play, Blog, and About. Those sections support the main build a hooper workflow without making you leave the browser.

Who it is for

Build a Hooper is best for people who enjoy NBA hypotheticals, basketball trivia, and roster-building games. It suits users who like a build a hooper challenge that rewards judgment about player skills rather than fantasy league management.

Good fits include:

NBA fans who want a quick interactive game.

Players who enjoy comparing legends across eras.

People who like simulated outcomes and leaderboard competition.

Casual visitors who want a free browser game with no signup wall.

Content creators looking for a shareable basketball result.

Because the app revolves around historic teams and skill theft, it also works as a conversation starter. You can build a weirdly balanced hooper, a high-scoring scorer, or a defense-first monster and see how the sim treats the profile.

Build a Hooper is an independent fan project, not an official NBA product, and it is not affiliated with the NBA, NBA 2K, or Take-Two Interactive. That means the build a hooper season sim should be treated as entertainment, not a scouting tool or an official player rating system.

A few practical caveats matter:

- The app is free, but the source does not mention a paid tier or mobile apps.
- The draft uses random historic teams, so you cannot assume a fixed team order.
- The season simulator is a game mechanic, not a real-world statistical model.
- Leaderboard placement depends on completed sims and the site's ranking rules, so results are competitive but not official.
- If you need real NBA stats, rosters, or historical records, use official league sources instead of this tool.

In short, Build a Hooper is a build a hooper game first and a reference tool second. It is strongest when you use it to experiment, compare builds, and enjoy the 82-game season sim as a basketball thought experiment.
